EUROPEAN CRIME PREVENTION NETWORK

A SELECTION OF OUR OUTPUT

Preventing phone scams

Individual fraud is a type of fraud in which individual citizens are being targeted by criminals and are persuaded into a cooperative mindset. The essential tactic to nudge the victim into this compliant relationship is called social engineering. This allows the offender to obtain the confidence from the victim that is crucial to the success of the scam. Read the toolbox

Fraud

In order to tackle and prevent individual fraud, a clear policy is needed. This policy paper first looks at the existing EU policy on individual fraud, in the second chapter we formulate some recommendations. Discover the paper

Pickpocketing

There are two main tracks that deserve attention in order to come to a complete and effective prevention of pickpocketing: the first track consists of a prevention campaign that is thoroughly prepared; the second track is all about cooperation. Learn more

Radicalisation and violent extremism

The monitor concludes that it is necessary to continue to invest in an evidence-based approach to the prevention of radicalisation and violent extremism; and a cross-fertilisation between practice and research. Read more

Physical ATM attacks

It is only a matter of time before mod operandi emerging in one country spread to other countries. This clearly indicates the need for adoption of the preventive and operational measures at the EU level with private, public and law-enforcement partners working closely together. More info
