Plenary sessions

Smart coalitions against organised crime

In crime prevention cooperation is critical: by working together we can achieve maximum results. An integrated approach requires different government agencies, civil society, and private entrepreneurs to cooperate with traditional crime response actors. But that is not always easy. Decisive and responsive management of parties is essential. And the cooperation should be rooted firmly in the current knowledge infrastructure: what works and what does not.

The evaluation of crime prevention

In line with the needs of the field and to provide practitioners with the appropriate knowledge and skills to carry out evaluations, Ghent University has been commissioned by the EUCPN to develop a teaching package. This package consists of educational material to support the training and a manual for delivering the training. This session will give a first look.

Cross-border cooperation

Cross-border cooperation and exchange of information at local, regional and European level is a must to fight organised crime. But what are the challenges partners face in doing this? Speakers from the Finnish Crime Prevention Council on the "Nordic cooperation model", the Benelux Secretariat on the role of the Benelux as a testing ground or laboratory within the European Union and Efus on how local and regional authorities cooperate in the field of crime prevention and urban security.

Concluding remarks

In this concluding session Professor Paul Eklom will draw on his experience in research, evaluation and knowledge capture of partnership working in crime prevention, to draw out key issues raised during the conference. To anticipate some examples: why do we need partnerships, what are the problems and obstacles, what is the right kind of social/institutional environment, ...
